2. Educational Aims and Course Aims

School Education Aims:

- to develop flexible approaches to programme delivery and student support which reflect the needs and expectations of our students;

- to encourage the development of students' intellectual and imaginative powers, creativity, independence, critical self-awareness, imagination and skills that will enhance global employment opportunities on graduation in all programmes;

- to provide a learning experience that is informed by research, scholarship, reflective practice and engagement with fashion and design industry and the professions.

Programme Aims:

The aim of the three-year course in Art History and Culture, is to educate future artistic professionals able to work in the cultural field of a given project, supplying course participants with the tools to contextualise critical works, supported by a deep historical vision. The market is currently demanding for more and more cultural experts endowed with specific art competences and prepared to work in the field of 'interdisciplinarity'; that implies all those subjects belonging to the culture of a contemporary project, together with the ability to translate the multitude of contemporary artistic practices.

The course aims to supply students with a historical and critical methodology to allow them to interpret and analyse works of art, through the contextualisation and the interpretation of their languages and implicit contents.

Students learn how to communicate acquired notions and their own projects both in an academic manner (oral and written), addressing a mainstream audience, and more specifically, addressing an audience of art experts. Cultural management is useful to identify the most suitable methods to be able to plan and manage of a cultural project in today's contemporary contexts.

4. Teaching/Learning and Assessment Strategy

Curriculum:

Throughout the entire first year of the course (divided into 3 phases) key knowledge will be acquired in art history, project culture, and cultural history. In parallel, notions on the main theories in communication will be introduced.

The syllabus begins with art history & culture where the course introduces students to the complex system of contemporary art, analysing its structures and circuits.

In the second phase, students will be introduced to research, writing and oral presentation skills, by analysing the rules and the various methods of academic publications of projects.

Phase three introduces emblematic examples to further understand and comprehend the application of newly acquired competences in research techniques, with the specific purpose of developing and cultivating individual research. The course includes phases of student revision and individual presentations as well as group presentations via seminars.

The second year follows the same structure, over three phases, where students acquire the historical and cultural notions that complete the artistic and cultural 'picture', right up to contemporary times, as well as acquiring skills in communication.

In the first phase the contemporary debate on the themes of iconography and iconology is discussed through the acquisition of visual cultural elements (cinema and photography) and their related interpretative concepts. An overview on the sources and modalities of iconographic research is also presented. The second phase looks at the publishing scene, related to art, together with in-depth research that will be put into practice on an individual project in the third phase.

During the third year the course focuses on aesthetic analysis and on critique that will be developed and investigated more in depth throughout the year. Students are introduced to cultural management and to key contemporary organisations and their policies, which currently support this increasingly important and debated sector.

Students complete their work with the development of an individual project (art exhibition) where they will be responsible for all cultural and curatorial aspects, its economic-managerial strategy, as well as communication strategy. Individual work is constantly reviewed to ensure comprehension and successful progress, alternating with lectures and seminars-testimonials by cultural managers, key players and experts in the field. The final project outcome is evaluated by a group of tutors and art experts.

Programme methods:

The programme is designed to facilitate the development of a student who will be highly employable and will allow them to investigate and develop their strengths.

The programme will present students with a variety of approaches to learning and assessment strategies that will promote intellectual, imaginative, analytical and critical judgement.

It will allow students to develop understanding as well as their presentation and communication skills, which they will be able to demonstrate in a variety of forms.

A combination of different learning and teaching methodologies are employed in order to promote reflective learning and develop generic transferable skills.

Methods include:

- projects to encourage independent learning through investigation, enquiry and problem solving;
- group project to enhance interpersonal and collaborative skills;
- tutorials and group tutorials to facilitate shared experiences and best practice;
- seminars, formal lectures and workshops;
- study, trips, external projects and competitions present the students with another dimension to their learning experience;
- guest speakers provide the students with a full, broader and real prospective to their specialist field of study.

Students will have the opportunity to demonstrate their achievement of the intended learning outcomes through a variety of tests appropriate to their field of study.

Course Specific Assessment Criteria:

The methods of assessment used give breadth and depth, which allow for both the formative and summative assessment of every student at each stage of the programme.

Assessment methods to support learning: the programme uses a balanced assessment system, both summative and formative as an integral part of gathering information on student learning. Different forms of assessment can, and where appropriate should, be used to test different types of skills and learning.

Formative Assessment:

Formative assessment informs both teachers and students about student understanding at a point when timely adjustments can be made. In formative assessment students could be involved in the assessment process. These formative assessment situations will also give students an opportunity to learn to critique the work of others. Some of the instructional strategies that will be used formatively include the following:

- criteria and goal setting: asking students to participate in establishing what should be included in criteria for success;

- self and peer assessment: With peer evaluation, students see each other as resources for understanding and checking for quality work against previously established criteria;
- student record keeping: helps students better understand their own learning as evidenced by their classroom work. This process of students keeping ongoing records of their work not only engages students, it also helps them, beyond a "grade," to see where they started and the progress they are making toward the learning goal.

Summative Assessments:

these assessments are a means of gauging student learning, at a particular point in time, relative to established marking criteria. Summative assessments > can occur during as well as at the end of each unit and concentrate on specific evidence of student work, examples as follows:

Portfolio Assessment > is used to assess a variety of projects that have been developed throughout the unit.

Practical Coursework > allows the students to demonstrate their understanding and application of practical areas of study.

Written Reports > are required in some study areas, where a clear and structured brief is provided and the students are asked to submit work to be marked independently and anonymously by staff.

Formal Examinations > are required in some study areas.

Presentations > are used in some subjects to allow the student to develop their professional communication and presentation skills.

Student Projects > are used when the student is required to submit work to be marked independently and anonymously.

A written record of these tutorials will be kept in the student's file for reference and to assist in the monitoring of student progress.

For matters of pastoral care the Student Support Officers will help in:

- finding their way around;
- managing their time;
- dealing with stress;

- understanding and applying the school's rules;
- anything else the officers can advise on.

One-to-one appointments may be made by phone, through the receptionists or by email. Where possible students can expect to be seen almost immediately, or contacted to arrange a suitable time.

11. Student Evaluation

Student feedback is essential to the programme development and student comments are used to enhance both the successful management of the programme and the teaching/learning strategies.

Istituto Marangoni gathers student opinion in a variety of ways, which may include the following:

- informal contact with Programme Leader and subject Tutor, and through appointments with academic staff;
- end of Unit Evaluation;
- end of academic year online questionnaires where students will be invited to reflect on their overall experience in their school. Issues will be taken to Programme Reflective Meetings and added to the Annual Academic Monitoring Report;
- Programme Committee.

Istituto Marangoni would prefer that on most occasions students be identified when giving constructive feedback on the course and teaching methods. There might be occasions when it is not appropriate and Istituto Marangoni recognizes this exception.

In these instances, programme teams and central support services will ensure that anonymity and confidentiality is respected.

In order to 'close the feedback loop' and to communicate any improvements resulting from student participation at least once every academic year, programme teams relate back to students the actions taken in response to student views.

Students will be asked to respond to a series of questions, for example, if they were clear about what they were meant to be learning on the unit, if the teaching had helped them learn effectively and if they have developed new or existing skills. The data will be analysed and the Programme Leader will be required to comment on:

- key strengths and issues arising from student performance;
- key strengths and issues arising from student feedback;
- actions and improvements for the next academic year.
